

PATHFINDER NOW EN ROUTE TO ROME; LEAVES AT 8.45

Pilot Roger Q. Williams and Captain Lewis A. Yancey, Take Off from Maine

LONGEST OCEAN FLIGHT

Ship Carries No Radio; Coast Guard Cutters Anchored Offshore

OLD ORCHARD BEACH, Maine, July 8.—Undaunted by a series of accidents and delays, two courageous American airmen today started off on a non-stop 4,800 mile flight to Rome. Pilot Roger Q. Williams and Captain Lewis A. Yancey, navigator, swept off the beach here today at 8.45 a. m. (eastern daylight time) in the Bellanca monoplane Pathfinder, bound to the Eternal City on the most ambitious trans-Atlantic air voyage in the history of aviation.

It was the longest attempted trans-Atlantic hop on record. The Americans planned to be in Rome within fifty hours.

Balked for nearly two hours today by thick banks of fog, the Pathfinder finally ran down the beach to the cheers and shouts of 2,000 persons and after reaching a point approximately one mile and a quarter from the starting point above the hangar of Captain Harry Jones swept off the silvery sand.

Climbing to 250 feet, the Pathfinder roared over the Promenade Pier, which was crowded with spectators.

The Pathfinder continued in a southerly direction for several minutes and then made a wide circle.

The fog obscured the vision of those on the beach but they could make out in the mist an outline of the Rome bound craft as she swung eastward and began to gain altitude.

As the intrepid American birdmen turned seaward the coastguard amphibian Loening, piloted by Lieutenant Leonard M. Melka, went into the air as a convoy for a hundred miles out.

Following the Loening the flying boat Savoia-Marchetti, carrying a party of fourteen New York persons went aloft to join in the convoy. Aboard the flying boat was Miss Thea Rasche, the German "flying frau" who is making plans for a solo flight to Berlin from this beach within a month.

Five minutes after the take-off, executed perfectly by Pilot Roger Williams, the Pathfinder could be seen dimly through the fog, gaining altitude. A few minutes later she was lost to sight, at that time being headed toward Cape Elizabeth.

Williams and Yancey were shaping a course to the eastward to Cape Sable, planning to fly along the coastline of Maine but high above the fog banks.

Off Cape Sable the airmen planned to swing east southeast to the "corners" of the trans-Atlantic ship lane, about 1,000 miles out. From there they will soar above the 41st parallel, which will bring them about 100 miles north of the Azores. Then they will continue to Cape Ortega, and thence across France to the Mediterranean to Rome.

The Pathfinder carried no radio but for a short distance reports were sent shoreward from the radio of the Loening. These were picked up by the coastguard radio station at Gloucester, Mass. Fifteen minutes after the take-off all was reported well with the Pathfinder, but she was running through a heavy fog.

She had gained an altitude of approximately 500 feet and seemed to be having no difficulty in lifting her load of 6,200 pounds. Finally she was completely lost from sight in the fog banks.

Two fast coastguard cutters were anchored far off shore, one fifty miles out. When news of the takeoff was flashed from the coastguard amphibian, anchors of the cutter were hauled up and both speedy vessels were ready at a moment's notice to go to the aid of the Pathfinder should it be found necessary.

After leaving the convoy of the amphibian and the flying boat the Pathfinder, roaring on her way to Rome, was not expected to be sighted on the shore because of the dense fog banks clinging to the coast from Nova Scotia to Boston and below.

NEW HOPE RESIDENTS PURCHASE ART CENTRE

Structure Has Rich Historic Background and Is Ideal For Exhibits

TO REMODEL BUILDING

NEW HOPE, July 8.—The old Phillips Mill, north of this borough, has attracted wide attention during the past few months through its purchase by residents for use as an art centre.

Already several exhibits of paintings have been held there and have drawn scores of visitors from many distant places.

It is intended that the mill, with a long and interesting history, be preserved for affairs that centre in the artist and private school colony hereabouts.

There are records showing that the first mill here was erected in 1743. In 1756 Aaron Phillips bought it and from that time there were four generations of the Phillips family to operate it as a prosperous business. The last one to run the mill was Charles Phillips, but the change in milling methods and the introduction of roller process made it difficult for a small wheel grinding mill to be operated profitably, and the place was sold to Dr. Marshall in 1891.

The west wall of the present mill was the east wall of the original building, but every bit of the present structure gives evidence of its age. Several of the old grinding wheels are still about the grounds or built into the paving at the adjoining property of William L. Lathrop, dean of the art colony. Just across the road is the attractive house and shops of the late Morgan Colt, artist in wrought iron as well as in oil painting. The Holmquist School for Girls is also nearby and the Solebury School for Boys a short distance up the road.

Some time ago the mill was thoroughly renovated and has been the scene of dances, plays, concerts and other public gatherings for the folks of that neighborhood. Some of the plays that have been given there in these unique surroundings were of unusual interest due to the fact that the casts included men and women who have had professional experience on the stage or exceptional literary training.

Surveys for the reconstruction of the River Road call for a new right of way that will take the highway some distance away from the mill, eliminating the dangerous curve around the mill on a narrow road.

One of the provisions in the purchase agreement is that the building be used for art purposes.

FOUR HUNDRED END REUNION AT THE NATIONAL FARM SCHOOL, DOYLESTOWN

First Student at Doylestown Returns for Alumni Session — Philadelphia Man is Honored — Tribute Paid Krauskopf — Officers Are Elected

DOYLESTOWN, July 8.—The first student to step onto the National Farm School campus when it was an undeveloped and unsightly tract thirty-three years ago, returned yesterday for the annual reunion of the Farm School Alumni Association held at the school, two miles west of this town.

He is Joseph Goldman, of Rockford, Ill., a graduate of the class of 1901. He had never been back since his graduation with five others.

A highly developed educational institution with nearly 200 students and 1100 acres of rich farming soil greeted Goldman's eyes today, a school where worthy boys, selected from every section of the United States, receive a free course in practical and scientific agriculture and all its branches, made possible by philanthropic men and women throughout the United States.

"I came to Doylestown from Chicago thirty-three years ago and paid 20 cents to a hack driver to transport me to the school," said Mr. Goldman. "I was the first student to sign up. I'll never regret having entered the school, and I attribute my success to the training here."

Goldman is a steel company official. Four hundred graduates of the school who have been attending the reunion for the last two days left last night for their homes in various sections of the United States.

Sunday morning a service was held in the Krauskopf Memorial Library in memory of the founder of the school, Dr. Krauskopf. That was followed by dedication of the alumni grandstand on Alumni Athletic Field, in memory of Dr. J. Ludwig Stern, of New York.

At the annual business meeting of the Alumni Association the following were elected to office:

President, Isaac Stern, of New York; vice-presidents, Carl Kahn, of Chicago, and Edgar Hesch, of Philadelphia; secretary and treasurer, Samuel B. Samuels, athletic coach of the school.

The Alumni Association authorized the publication of a year book to contain the photographs and vocations of all graduates of the school since its organization.

At the alumni banquet addresses were made by Herbert D. Allman, of Philadelphia, president of the school; Dr. John Washburn, a former dean of the school; Dr. Louis Nushbaum, assistant superintendent of schools of Philadelphia; Dr. C. L. Goodling, dean of the National Farm School; Morris Jacobs and Henry A. James, members of the Board of Trustees, and Dr. James A. Pratt, president of the Williamson Trade School.

In appreciation of the service of Mr. Allman, who donates his services as the head of the school, the Alumni Association presented a platinum wrist watch to him.

In his annual message to the alumni, Mr. Allman said school-research records show that more graduates every year are remaining in agriculture.

"Schools like the National Farm School are doing more to put agriculture on a firm and sound basis than all the political wrangling and legislation," he said.

"We are training young men to become agriculturists with business heads, the crying need today in American agriculture."

"This school is yours. It is gratifying to know that during the last five years our capital assets have increased threefold. Our school plant is worth close to $3,000,000."

"We do have a deficit in our maintenance fund, which accumulates because we accept more boys than we should, owing to the growing pressure of so many worthy applicants. The enrollment has increased over 100 per cent., and last year fifty-eight students were graduated. All were placed in responsible positions, the great majority in agriculture."

In the annual baseball game between the alumni and the "varsity," the varsity was defeated, 6 to 4.

A concert by the farm school thirty-five-piece band, under the leadership of Lieutenant Frankel, of Philadelphia, director of the Farm School Band, closed the festivities of the day.

ONE DEATH HERE DUE TO EXTREME HEAT WAVE

Mrs. Emilie De Martelliere, 69, Succumbs After Several Weeks' Illness

CANCER HELPING CAUSE

Bristol sweltered yesterday in the hottest day of the year when the mercury touched 91. Despite the fact that a 25-mile-an-hour breeze blew all day it brought but little relief. All of the bathing beaches in this section were crowded and hundreds remained in the water the greater part of the day.

One heat prostration was reported here. Mrs. Emilie De Martelliere, 69, of 1614 Tren on avenue, who had been ill for quite some time with cancer, died of heat prostration with cancer of the liver as a contributing cause.

The deceased had been operated on in Boston last October and had come to make her home with her daughter here.

Six daughters and three sons survive, and the funeral will be held from a Philadelphia residence.

KEYSTONE HEAD ATTENDS AIR-RAIL LINE START

Edgar N. Gott at Ceremonies in New York and Goes To Columbus, Ohio

EPOCH MAKING EVENT

Edgar N. Gott, president, Keystone Aircraft Corporation, was a guest yesterday at the ceremonies which attended the inauguration of the air-rail line by the P. R. R. from coast to coast. Mr. Gott, after attending the ceremonies in New York station, went by rail along with the P. R. R. officials in a special train to Columbus, Ohio.

NEW YORK, July 8.—A new system of passenger travel which places the Atlantic and Pacific coasts within forty-eight hours of each other was formally opened to general traffic at the Pennsylvania's terminal last night, with dedicatory and christening ceremonies in which railroad, aviation and city officials participated, and with the departure of the first group of paying passengers on the new "Airway Limited," who, traveling by rail and plane, will be in Los Angeles Tuesday evening.

A message flashed from the Pacific coast by Colonel Charles A. Lindbergh was the signal for the departure of the train on the first link of the trip to the California city.

In the party of seventeen plane-travelers were Miss Amelia Earhart, trans-Atlantic flyer and now assistant passenger agent of the Transcontinental Air Transport; several Pennsylvania Railroad officials and officials of the Transcontinental Air Transport, as well as a number of paying passengers.

Just before the departure of the train, the T. A. T. plane, City of New York, was christened in the concourse at the Pennsylvania Station by Amelia Earhart and the "Airway Limited" was christened by Dorothy Stone, daughter of Actor Fred Stone.

With the departure at 7.05 o'clock of the "Airway Limited," a new fast train of the Pennsylvania Railroad, which has been added to the list of the trains which provide fast overnight service to the air-rail passengers to Port Columbus, Ohio, first transfer point of the new line, the second air-rail system to provide New York with coast-to-coast service to be opened within a month has started.

On June 15 last there was opened the first air-rail line through a combination of the services of the New York Central, the Universal Airlines and the Santa Fe Railroad. This provided a sixty-hour service to the coast, with one day flying. The Transcontinental Air Transport, which was the line opened last night, by flying its passengers two days will produce a forty-eight to fifty-hour service.

Two-way travel on the forty-eight hour transcontinental line will be in operation tomorrow, when the party of seventeen passengers who left here tonight begin their first day of flying on the line from Port Columbus, near Columbus, Ohio, to Waynoka, Okla. At about the same time the first east-bound party, riding in two planes, one of which will be piloted by Colonel Charles A. Lindbergh, with Mrs. Lindbergh as a guest of honor, will leave the Grand Central Air Terminal in Los Angeles and arrive in New York on Wednesday morning.

FALLSINGTON MAN LOSES HEAVILY IN TRENTON FRAUD

M. Watson Moon Loses Life-time Savings Thru Trickery of Joseph R. Ashmore

RELATIVES LOSE, TOO

Plan Was to Borrow Money On Cancelled Mortgages and Spurious Property

FALLSINGTON, July 8.—M. Watson Moon, 80 years old, postmaster and proprietor of the general store here, has been defrauded of his life-time savings as well as hundreds of dollars belonging to his relatives by the speculations of a friend whom he had known for 35 years.

The fraud came to light in Trenton, N. J., Saturday when it was revealed that Joseph R. Ashmore, prominent real estate and investment broker, who was burned to death in an automobile accident June 15th, left behind a financial debacle far exceeding any revealed in this section recently.

Ashmore was a member of the firm of Wright and Company, Trenton, N. J., and according to evidence unearthed and revealed by lawyers it is stated that Ashmore has defrauded clients of an amount ranging from $90,000 to $200,000.

Harry S. Wright, partner of Ashmore, explains that he devoted himself exclusively to the firm's fire insurance business, leaving all real estate and mortgage business to his partner, having no knowledge of Ashmore's activities.

Ashmore died in the Somerset Hospital at Somerville, June 17th, two days after he had been burned in an automobile accident.

So far as it is known Mr. Moon is the only Bucks County man to have suffered by Ashmore's trickery. A spokesman for Mr. Moon today said that Mr. Moon and several members of his family will suffer through the financial loss incurred by Ashmore's frauds.

"We had known Mr. Ashmore for 35 years as a lawyer and business man in Trenton. He had invested money for us over a period of several years. Most of the mortgages he placed for us were on properties in Trenton. We are not sure as yet as to the exact amount which we have lost." It is stated that the amount will total at least $20,000.

Mr. Moon is very well known in the Fallsington section, and also in Bristol. He is identified with the Bristol Lodge of Elks, and Masonic Fraternity.

Mr. Moon and his family have employed counsel in an endeavor to retrieve their losses, although very little hope is held for regaining the lost money.

Ashmore's scheme was to erase names and addresses from cancelled mortgages and substitute therein the names and addresses of the individuals from whom he had borrowed the money. It is said that the interest payments were always met.

The Rev. W. D. Thatcher of the First Baptist Church, Trenton, is among a long list of those robbed, Thatcher was Ashmore's pastor.

The clergyman, after years of saving, accumulated $10,000 in a building and loan investment. He used $6,000 to build his home in White Horse, and placed the $4,000 in a bank. Several years ago he decided to invest the money, and remarked to his parishioner, Ashmore, that he had some money to invest. Ashmore took the money and gave Dr. Thatcher a mortgage on a Laurel avenue house. That mortgage was a legitimate document.

Recently, Ashmore went to his pastor and told him he would have to reassign the $4,000 investment to another mortgage. Dr. Thatcher consented, unsuspecting that the suave and cultured business man was bent on ruining him. Ashmore took him to a house on Reading avenue and asked him if he thought the property suitable to cover his money. Dr. Thatcher agreed to take out a mortgage on the Reading Avenue property.

A few days elapsed and Ashmore handed over the mortgage. It now has been disclosed as a false and forged document, utterly worthless.

Like the other victims, Dr. Thatcher trusted implicitly in Ashmore's integrity. The broker held a prominent place in the business life of the city, and was held in high regard. He posed as a churchman, was a member of various Masonic lodges, was past president of the National, State and Trenton Real Estate Boards, and had a personality making for confidence.

NO CRIME "WAVE"

There is no "crime wave" and juvenile delinquents are not increasing in numbers, declares Dr. G. W. Kirchwey, former warden of Sing Sing Prison, and he has the figures to sustain his assertions.

It is the belief of Dr. Kirchwey that the universal belief that crime is increasing is an obsession, a fixed emotional state, which the new psychologists call a "complex." The belief is contradicted by accurate statistics.

What should disturb the nation, according to this authority on penology, is not an imagined increase of crime, but the indubitable continuance of it. If crime would abate temporarily there would be more time for preventive work—for getting at the causes of crime.

It is readily to be seen that the public might acquire the impression that crime was increasing from the more daring methods now employed by some criminals and from the sensational uses made of the automobiles by the modern criminal. Eliminate liquor law violations and other recently created misdemeanors and one can see at once that crime actually is on the wane.

Dr. Kirchwey says there is no reason or excuse for supposing that boys and girls are any worse today than they always were, the probabilities being that they average better now than ever before.

Since juvenile courts have been established generally throughout the nation many have noted that what were once childish pranks now constitute sufficient grounds to bring the child into the juvenile courts. When the rural boy fills his blouse and pants pockets from Farmer Brown's apple trees it is play. When the city boy snatches an apple from Tony's fruit stand it is larceny. It is difficult to compare crime conditions of two generations.

CARLYLE'S CRITICISM

Thomas Carlyle wrote scathingly of the way the reading public with avidity seizes upon the latest scandal news about people unknown to the reader personally. Carlyle calls it the evidence of a small mind, and we think he is exactly right.

Metropolitan newspapers are the greatest offenders in the line of purveying this type of "news" to their readers, catering to the lower minds of the community by so doing.

Legitimate information about one's neighbors, such as the erection of a new barn, the births, the marriages and deaths in our own community are wholesome and are outside of the realm of impertinent curiosity, which drew the great Thomas' wrath. These are the main items carried by country weeklies, along with straight constructive matter like the doings of the chamber of commerce and the other public bodies and officials. They do not descend to the tattling of private scandals, or at least when they do one soon sees another newspaper for sale and another editor seeking new fields.

Carlyle's criticism does not concern country weeklies. The small minds, completely empty, are more often found in the great cities than in the rural communities.

The Department of Agriculture is conducting tests to learn how tough a piece of beefsteak may be. We supposed there was only one degree—the toughest.

ECHOES OF THE PAST

ITEMS OF INTEREST AS CLIPPED FROM NEWSPAPER FILES

Comment was made in a half century old copy of "The Intelligencer," dated Saturday, May 17, 1879, of the wholesale destruction of young shad along the Delaware river. It was said the destruction of the fish resulted from nets of too fine mesh being used so that smaller shad unable to escape were sold from 12 to 15 cents per dozen. Several attempts were made to procure the passage of laws compelling the use of a net with a mesh large enough to permit the young fish to escape, but these attempts were unsuccessful. It was reported that the herring fishermen were opposed to such a law.

Residents of Bucks county called for jury service in the county seat included John B. Keller, Haycock, whose occupation was listed as a hotel keeper; Ira Hogeland, Newtown, inn keeper; Isaac Sollday, Milford, drover; Charles B. Fry, Plumstead, pump maker; Isaac Sutch, Warwick, blacksmith; Cornelius Herstine, Nockamixon, potter; John G. Barnot, New Britain, coach maker; Joseph Peaker, Solebury, lime burner, and William D. Rowland, Hilltown, wheelwright. The others were listed as farmers, merchants, mechanics, millers and gentlemen.

Twenty-five tons of hay, hundreds of dollars worth of grain and farming implements and a cow and a calf were burned in a fire which destroyed the barn and three hay houses on the farm of Mrs. Rachel Smith, Middletown township.

Friends and relatives were entertaining hopes for the recovery of Morris Black, a resident of Riegelsville, who had one of his legs amputated as the result of having it injured on the railroad. It was also noted in the Riegelsville column that there was great rejoicing on the part of the employees that the Durham furnace was again "fired." B. F. Fackenthal, Jr., was in charge.

Michael Dougherty, Bristol, who during the Civil War was a prisoner in the Andersonville prison, went to New York to attend a reunion of other soldiers who had been incarcerated at the same place.

According to a 35-year-old copy of the Newtown Enterprise, dated June 2, 1894:

John Willard, a well known resident of near Hulmeville, was stricken with paralysis and died within three days.

Mrs. Josephine Boileau bequeathed the sum of $500 to the poor fund of Southampton Baptist Church.

The barns of Richard H. Janney, near New Hope, and Horace T. Smith, near Buckmanville, were struck by lightning.

Miss Louise White, of Fallsington, well known as one of Bucks county's successful teachers, was one of the post graduates of the class of '94, of the Neff College of Oratory, Philadelphia.

Wedding announcements were issued for Miss Maymie, daughter of Algernon S. Cadwallader, of Yardley, and J. Malcolm Franklin, of Philadelphia; Miss Bessie N., daughter of Charles D. Weart, of Yardley, and Robert W. Welsh, of Philadelphia, and Miss Anna, daughter of J. Wittingham Livezey, of Doylestown, and J. Davis Duffield.

Tramps smoking in the hay loft of Col. Edward Morrell's large three-story barn at Torresdale, fired the structure and it was soon reduced to ashes. Three valuable horses were burned.

Mary P. Krewson, Kate Koch, Emma Pool and Charles P. Large were graduated from the Hughesian School in Buckingham, Miss Cynthia Doan, principal.

Willie King attended every day during the term at Groveland School, Northampton township, and stood at the head of his class the entire year. Mabel Luff was absent but one day. Ethel Twining and Ida Blaker were the graduates.

Among the jurors at the June term of court were: John H. Sickel, Bensalem; Aaron L. Fore, Lower Makefield; George Brooks, Newtown; Samuel Cornell, Northampton; Henry C. Parry, Langhorne; George Wildman, Langhorne Manor; H. H. Yerkes, Hulmeville; Comly Woodman, Lower Buckingham; Lincoln Spencer, Northampton, and Thomas B. Linton, Newtown township.

Memorial services at Newtown were largely attended. The parade was headed by the Newtown Cornet Band followed by the T. H. Wynkop Post, G. A. R., and the K. M. C. and P. O. S. of A. A male quartet composed of Rev. J. T. Elms, William Whalen, James and Robert S. Irvin, sang. J. M. Vanderslice, Esq., of Philadelphia, was the speaker.

LIVE

where you work

Many people employed in Bristol are commuting to and from their work each day. This means an unnecessary expense and a waste of time. They must leave home earlier and return later than if they lived in the town where they are employed. They have less time for pleasure and less time to spend with their families than if they resided here.

Why commute?

Bristol as a place of residence offers every opportunity to be found in a large city. There are paved streets, sanitary sewers, good schools and churches of every denomination; periodic collection of ashes and garbage, police protection and ample space for outdoor recreation.

Housing is adequate

Housing facilities are adequate to meet the needs of all. There are dwellings here which will meet the needs of almost every family. Big six room houses with all modern conveniences including front porches and rear yards. They rent as low as $25 per month, and are comparable in type to those in the larger cities renting for nearly twice the amount.

You're a part of the community

If you live in Bristol you are a part of the community. You are not lost in the crowds of a great city where often times your next door neighbor doesn't know you. Live in Bristol and participate in its affairs and you will find life much more worth the living.

MATCHING ACCESSORIES ADD A ZESTFUL NOTE TO THE MODE

FROM simplest dressmaker and milliner to most exalted couturiere and modiste, from bootmaker to handbag specialist, jeweler, glove-maker and scarf designer, the whole world of fashionists have gone matchmaking.

This idea of matching this, that and the other of costume accessories has added a very zestful and exciting note to the apparel program. Not only are the stylists who set the mode challenged to play up their most intriguing creative talents, but the clientele which they serve are inspired to make of shopping an art. For with fashion's demand for a "perfect match" no longer can a woman who would dress successfully buy casually or impulsively this and that which happens to strike her fancy. Rather must she cultivate to a nicety the study of color values and related design, in order to exercise that fine discrimination in her selections such as will so correlate her attire that each costume will stand out unified and individualized.

The matching vogue plays no favorites. Accessories are expected to match whether the costume be the simplest sort for sportswear or for the street ensemble, or for resplendent evening attire.

In the picture are shown several intriguing "sets." The felt hat banded with the identical silk print of the large kerchief scarf which is knotted nonchalantly about the shoulders presents an appealing idea—especially when the gay print is in vivid tone.

The newest thing in scarfs is the narrow long kind, such as the one sketched with the matching pocketbook in this illustration. A combination such as this gives tone to any street costume.

Shoes-to-match is the latest hobby of the mode—which means that fashionable shoes are this season made of anything from straw or designful cotton prints to the most exquisite silks and novelty fabrics. The pocketbook and shoes circled in the upper right corner of the picture are handsome embroidered crepe de chine.

SPORTS

Psychology Is Seen in Yankee Contests

Inability to beat New York has been Philadelphia's greatest handicap in the last two years. Grove, invincible against six teams in the American league, wilts before the attack of the Yankees.

Grove lost eight games last season and he lost six of them to New York.

He is a fast ball pitcher and New York is a fast ball hitting team.

If Grove overcomes the New York hoodoo Philadelphia will have a better chance of winning.

There is considerable psychology involved and psychology is hard to beat in baseball, or anywhere else in sports for that matter.

Cubs Using Pitcher to Imitate Enemy in Game

Henry Gramp is a fixture on the Chicago Cubs' pitching staff, yet he never pitches a game. He is the only major league baseball player who is neither a regular nor a substitute.

Nor is he a bat boy. "Official batting pitcher" is Gramp's title. While other big league clubs rotate that job among regular and relief twirlers, the Cubs employ Gramp almost exclusively in that role. For three seasons Gramp has held his job, working every day.

His favorite stunt is to imitate the opposing pitcher for the day. If Alexander is hurling for the Cardinals, Gramp will throw as Alex does; if Carl Mayes is pitching for the Reds, Hank will feed underhand tosses to Cub batters.

Gramp finishes his day's labors before his mates start to earn their day's pay. By three o'clock of any afternoon he is washed up, for the box score never includes his name.

There are rumors abroad that Miss Florence Killilea will serve as head of the Milwaukee club until a new owner is found.

The receipts of the National Amateur Athletic Union basketball championship tournament run off recently in the convention hall in Kansas City, Mo., were $17,824. The tourney lasted six nights.

Big Tennis Upset

Young Wilmer Allison, below, of Texas, and Johnny Van Ryn, top, of East Orange, N. Respect Ability of Bucky Harris

AS ONE gads about meeting good athletes who will be around later and some who will be elsewhere later, it is an every day occurrence to encounter the opinion that "Detroit is going to be pretty good this year," writes Irving Vaughan in the Chicago Tribune.

Such expressions naturally are questioned, and in the course of the questioning, you learn that the lone excuse for the optimism is that Harris is the Tiger leader.

It is apparent that Harris as a manager stands high not only among the mill kan of players but also among the stars and even the rival pilots. The impression prevails that the ex-manager of the Washington troops is a natural leader who can lead without irritating.

This idea sprang up in 1924 when the boylike Bucky sent the Washingtons galloping into a world's championship and was perpetuated when he followed with a pennant in 1925. Later he didn't go quite so well, at least Owner Griffith thought so and gave him his papers, but with the rank and file Harris remains the little hero who can't go wrong.

The Harris boosters undoubtedly are sincere, but there are things about Bucky's present situation that are more weighty than past performances. For one thing, Harris enjoyed his greatest managerial successes when he was on the ball field playing every day, and age now has taken from him the ability that made him good enough for regular work. It will be recalled that Eddie Collins managed capably while playing, but fell down when he tried to lead from the bench. Another item to consider is that Harris is not going to have a whale of a team unless unexpected help develops.

What Harris is going to need is a quantity of pitching strength. For years pitching has been a chronic weakness of Detroit teams. The hitters always were there but not the hurlers. To heal up this old wound it will be necessary for George Uble to come back and pitch as he did when at the top of his career with the Indians. There is reason to suspect he can't do this. And even if Uble is able to work regularly, he will have to be surrounded by at least three others good enough to take a turn and two or three more who can fill in.

Bucky Harris.

"The REDEEMING SIN"

By VIRGINIA MORRIS

BASED ON THE STORY BY L.V. JEFFERSON

SYNOPSIS: Jetteur, the Apache, brings about the death of Fleurette's brother. She blames Dr. Raoul de Boise and as a method of revenge makes him love her, but in the process loses her own heart. They quarrel and soon after the doctor discovers her robbing the church. Pursuing her into the Paris sewers, he is stabbed by Jetteur and thrown into the water.

CHAPTER XI

BELIEVING Raoul dead, Fleurette passes a night of agony. In the morning Father Colomb comes to visit her, hoping to effect a reconciliation between her and the doctor. He tells the girl that de Boise has visited him the previous evening and has asked him to perform the marriage ceremony. "He wanted me for his wife," repeats Fleurette, "and now . . . he is dead."

THE kind old priest listens then to the complete story of the robbery and Raoul's tragic end. He is overcome by the horror of it but when he has recovered himself he says, "Although this terrible thing has happened, what is done is done, my child." "But, Father," begs Fleurette, "what must I do to atone?" "First of all, you must return what you stole," she is told.

JETTEUR is already at the Cafe Paradis when Fleurette enters. "Jetteur, give me the chalices," she demands, "I am going to return them to the church." At first the Apache laughs. Then he hesitates. Here perhaps is the opportunity he has long been seeking. "I will, Fleurette, but first you must marry me. Only if you marry me, will you get them."

THAT evening Father Colomb receives the first visit in many years from Fleurette. She puts the chalices in his hand. "You see I am trying to atone." "At what price, daughter?" "I have married Jetteur," she answers. The priest shakes his head. "To marry without love is a sin!" But the girl protests humbly, "Father, can't there be a redeeming sin?"

TO GET CERTIFIED TEACHER

A certified high school teacher will be obtained for all high school pupils who have failures and conditions in commercial subjects if enough pupils apply for summer school work. All pupils wishing to take commercial work may register by calling at the Wood street office of Bristol public schools, according to Howard A. James, principal.

Cost of Education

School costs for each pupil who attends varies widely in different sections of the Commonwealth, according to a study made by the State Department of Public Institutions for each of the counties.

Under the "current expense" classification in most instances the more sparsely settled counties expended the smallest amounts for each pupil. Lowest of all was Clearfield county with an average expense of $53.42, while Somerset was only a little higher with $54.60.

Bucks county spends an average cost per pupil of $72.78 for current expenses based on an average daily attendance. The total expenses per pupil are $95.83.

The Department's studies divided costs both under "current expenses" and "total expenses."

"Current expenses" cover all monies expended for the general operation of the system, including costs of administration, teachers' salaries, textbooks, supplies, fuel and repairs. The cost thus determined, school officials believe, reflects accurately the actual educational expenditures.

Under "total expenses" is included in addition to current costs all monies expended in the enlargement of the school plant such as the acquisition of new sites, erection of new buildings and the cost of financing such projects. Inasmuch as county school construction costs vary greatly in some years, officials pointed out that such averages would reflect annual expenditures and often are not representative of the cost unless taken over a long period.

New Hope Residents
Purchase Art Centre

chase of the mill for the new association is that it shall be available twice a year for exhibits of arts and craft by the residents of the community and the display now being held is the first of these. The interest shown has exceeded the hopes of the sponsors for there has been scarcely a time since it opened that there have not been visitors to inspect the work and at times the place has been crowded. Groups of students, artists and critics have been there and a number of the paintings have been sold. One went to Texas and others to various distant points. Prices paid are not announced but it is believed they have been in keeping with the quality of the work.

The equipment set up in the mill to facilitate the proper showing of canvases is ready for the future displays.
